Allegany County Updated Statistics and Recovery

The Allegany County Department of Health would like you to know that the 107 people released from isolation or quarantine includes some of our positive cases and other sick individuals who have recovered and are well. "People are recovering from COVID-19. They would not be released by our office without guidance from the New York State Department of Health confirming that they are well and not contagious any longer," said Tyler Shaw, Deputy Public Health Director. "Once released, they are free to go out, but they should still be practicing social distancing and staying at home as much as possible, like everyone else," he said.
